

A GUIDE TO COVID-19 PANDEMIC'S IMPACT ON RETIREMENT FUNDS

The current global health emergency caused by the COVID-19 outbreak has led to widespread losses across global financial markets. This is a global phenomenon and South Africa is no exception. Many investors from around the world, including South Africans, are becoming increasingly concerned about the impact on what may be their biggest investment – their retirement savings.

Vickie Lange, head of best practice at Alexander Forbes, offers South Africans a comprehensive response to concerns about the impact of COVID-19 on retirement funds.

1. Retirement fund savings have decreased

The value of your retirement savings is linked to what happens in the financial markets as most retirement savings are invested in financial markets. Lange explains, “Most retirement savings include some investments in shares. In the case of shares, when their value or price is increasing your savings will also be growing. When share prices are falling, the value of your savings will go down.”

She continues, “Share prices in all countries have fallen because of COVID-19 and other problems in the world economy” What we are also seeing is that shares are not the only asset class falling during this time. We are experiencing a broad-based fall across most asset classes, including more defensive investment types such as bonds.

These events have led to a decrease in retirement savings.

2. Global financial markets affect retirement savings in South Africa

What happens in the world economy and to global financial markets can affect retirement savings that are invested in financial markets offshore or local investments.

“This means that the recent falls in global financial markets have had a negative impact on the value of your investments,” says Lange.

3. Managing retirement fund savings during high market volatility

Different asset types behave differently over time and during different market cycles. Growth assets (investments), like shares (equity), and property, look to achieve an investment return that exceeds inflation. Assets like cash and bonds, on the other hand, achieve lower, more steady returns relative to growth assets.

“When investment values fall, people often react by changing their investment portfolios or preferring a cash-type investment like a money market fund, but because we don’t know when financial markets will fall and how far they will fall, these actions usually take place too late after investment values have already decreased,” comments Lange.

“Although switching into cash or other similar assets may seem like a good idea right now, these asset classes are less likely to grow your money by more than inflation in the long term,” adds Lange.

It’s easy to get emotional about your life savings. Hasty or poorly informed decisions could prevent you from reaching your goals. The most suitable investment portfolio for you to be invested in is one that will help you achieve your goals. She warns against impulsive reactions that leave you with savings that fall short of your needs.

4. Continue contributions to your retirement fund

Lange recommends that investors make every effort to continue their retirement fund contributions. Retirement funds have several other benefits that are worth mentioning:

- Contributions are tax deductible, so this lowers members' annual taxable income.
- Tax exemptions apply while retirement savings remain in a fund. No tax on interest, no capital gains tax and, no dividend withholding tax apply. Tax only applies when retirement savings are taken in cash by members when they leave an employer.
- No estate duty is payable on retirement savings, so this increases the benefits payable to beneficiaries.
- Retirement savings are generally protected from creditors.
- You benefit from lower costs. Employees will still need to save for their retirement, and the fees through an employer-sponsored arrangement are normally much lower than the employee could get by saving outside the retirement fund.
- Compulsory savings are a benefit. Most employees rely on their retirement funds as their only source of savings. By not having a retirement fund, employees will struggle to make ends meet when they retire.

"We love shopping when goods are on sale but strangely our instincts often differ when it comes to our investments. A decline in investment values often results in investors reacting impulsively by selling or changing their investments. However, it is during these periods that investors can afford to buy more shares with their money, just like when goods are on sale. This may lead to better investment values in future as markets recover," concludes Lange.

ENDS///

CONTACT INFORMATION: ALEXANDER FORBES

Consi Kalamaras, Head: PR & Media Relations: kalamarasc@forbes.com; +27 11 505 6012 or +27 (0) 82 808 4440

Sheri Cohen, Corporate Image: sheri@corporateimage.co.za; +27 (0) 71 683 1888

ABOUT ALEXANDER FORBES

Alexander Forbes is a specialised financial services group headquartered in South Africa focusing on employee benefits solutions for institutional clients, and financial well-being and retail financial solutions for individual clients, in particular employees of the Group's institutional clients. Alexander Forbes is listed on the Johannesburg Stock Exchange ("JSE"), and its primary clients span both the private and public sector market segments, including employers, retirement, health, investment and other special purpose funds on the institutional side, and individual members and beneficiaries of these funds, as well as the wider individual market, on the retail side. The main services provided by the Group include retirement funds and asset consulting, actuarial, investment and administration services, employee risk benefits and healthcare consulting, personal lines insurance, individual financial advisory and multi-manager investment solutions. Alexander Forbes' principal geographic focus is in South Africa, where it has been operating since 1935, sub-Saharan Africa, the UK and other selected jurisdictions which have employee benefits legislative frameworks similar to South Africa.

www.alexanderforbes.co.za

